

KAREN GOTTHELF

Committee Member

Karen Gotthelf is a Registered Industrial-Organisational Psychologist (RIOP) with the Hong Kong Psychological Society (HKPS) and Registered Psychologist with the Australian Health Practitioners Regulation Authority (AHRPA). She holds a Master in Organisational Psychology from Monash University and is currently completing her MRes/Professional Doctorate in Industrial-Organisational Psychology at Birkbeck University in London and Master in Counselling at Monash University.

Karen brings over 17 years of working experience as a Psychologist and Organisational Consultant across professional services, corporate, Employee Assistance Programmes, and medical settings in Australia and Hong Kong. She draws upon research, well validated models and data to inform interventions and solutions, with expertise spanning across competency frameworks, assessment and development, career and executive transitions, leadership development, recruitment and selection, survey design and application of cognitive behavioural approaches to inform executive coaching and wellness programmes. Karen is an expert advisor on various psychometrics that aim to enhance insight about how underlying traits and patterns of behaviours can impact on leadership, relationships and performance (e.g. HOGAN, OPQ32, Talent Q, Lumina Spark, Strong, MSCEIT).

Karen's passion for continuous learning, energised commercial partnerships with various international experts to host training events in Hong Kong for Psychologists, Coaches and other Health Alliance Practitioners. In 2021, she is honoured to be joining the HKPS as Council Member and Chair of the Continuous Education Committee as well as sharing the role of HK Representative with the APA's International Psychology Network for LGBTQI matters.
